Consent Form for Publication in Harvard Data Science Review

I, the undersigned, give my consent for my or my minor child's (insert name below) photograph, or other image of likeness, case history, or family history to be published in Harvard Data Science Review. I have seen and read the material to be published. I have discussed this consent form with _____ , who is an author of this article, and I understand the following:

Harvard Data Science Review is freely available on the Internet. Hence, anyone anywhere in the world may read material published in it. Readers include not only scholars, but also journalists and other members of the public.

I understand and acknowledge each of the following:

> While my name will not be published and Harvard Data Science Review will attempt to remove any information that could easily identify me, it is not possible to ensure complete anonymity, and someone may nevertheless be able to recognize me.

> The text of the article may be edited for style, grammar, consistency, and length in the course of the review process.

> Harvard Data Science Review articles are published under a Creative Commons Attribution license, which allows free dissemination for any legal purpose. Harvard Data Science Review articles may be translated into other languages and licensed for other commercial uses. I understand that I will not receive payment or royalties from the distribution or use of this material, and I do not have a claim on any possible future commercial use of this content.

> Signing this consent form does not remove my rights to privacy. I may revoke my consent at any time before publication, but once the information has been committed to publication (published), revocation of the consent is no longer possible.

If other family members are referenced (such as in a family history) I confirm I have their consent to authorize publication of relevant materials.
